| Director/Author/Star comment | N F SIMPSON:The Cresta Run was written simply to try and milk some of the almost unlimited possibilities that the intelligence and security set-up is constantly offering | DON TAYLOR:Fanny's First Play interested me because it's about teenage rebellion, vintage 1911, which was a rather more purposeful thing than it is now, and because it made me laugh a lot. In addition I don't think any director could resist the opportunity to send up the critics   | IAN HOLM:When we started rehearsing for the first production at Stratford last year we were all very dubious about having to do this banner-waving piece just because it comes in the middle of the cycle. But we found it much more interesting than we had thought, and the king a vivid character... The conscience of the king is much more to the fore than usual, more in line with contemporary thought. And it works—at least, the letters I receive indicate that it does | JOHN GIELGUD:I was immediately fascinated by the beauties of the play's changing moods and atmosphere, the cross-currents of farce and drama, the strange assortment of contrasted characters, touching and ridiculous at the same time   | WILLIAM CONGREVE:For my Part, I am as willing to laugh at any Body, and as easily diverted with an Object truly ridiculous. But at the same time, I can never care for seeing Things that force me to entertain low Thoughts of my Nature. I do not know how it is with others, but I confess freely to you, I could never look long upon a Monkey, without very mortifying Reflections   | INGRID BERGMAN:I wanted to play the part because I understand her. I know exactly how she felt. That is what women are like. They want to be happy and they want to be loved   |  |
| Critic's comment             |   | RONALD BRYDEN (THE NEW STATESMAN):One of the earliest instances of anti-theatre... a small Shavian morality about young Edwardians discovering to their parents that a sense of righteous enthusiasm may overflow conventional categories of right and wrong... obviously he was beginning to feel the fear which permeates his later work of the new world he had prophesied in which motives walked naked | HAROLD HOBSON (THE SUNDAY TIMES):Heroes are not always six feet tall and Ian Holm is bigger in heart than in stature. Mr Holm has tremendous power of voice when he chooses to release it and there are many stirring moments in his performance   | HERBERT KRETZMER (DAILY EXPRESS):Ivanov is not Chekhov's best play. He wrote it when he was 21 and his mind was full of Hamlet at the time. But Sir John Gielgud, who has directed this most stately and elegant production, has had the good sense to cast himself in the title role... Like Hamlet, Ivanov is in the grip of a profound self-despising apathy. The climate is truly Chekhovian. Everyone is frozen into postures of discontent and boredom... it is at once sad, bitter and comic | PHILIP HOPE-WALLACE (THE GUARDIAN):The essence of Congreve is the language, the repartee, the perpetual setting down of one character by another, the out-facing of the last speaker by the next. It is the joy of witty conversation overheard; and the hardest thing for most modern actors, short of opportunity to exercise gifts of high comedy, to achieve. About two-thirds of the time, this team manages a fair way with the style | THE TIMES:The play is the story of blundering innocence let loose in a house of routine sophistication and stagnant dignity. The ironies are gentle and superficial, limited as they are to knocking the mechanics of the emotional chess game while the emotions themselves remain sacrosanct | JOHN HIGGINS (FINANCIAL TIMES):Shaw... didn't write a comedy, even less a drama. Instead he devised a series of fantasies, and allowed them to talk. There are echoes of the time when the play was first performed (1931), some comments irritatingly relevant today, a number of epigrams and a leavening of truth |

ANITA HARRIS CHOOSES 7 CURRENT LONG PLAYERS

Photograph by Akehurst

NOEL COWARD FAVOURITES
THE LES REED ORCHESTRA
Nontana TL 5255

We have one or two world class arrangers in Britain, Johnny Keating, David Whittaker and here's another one, Les Reed. (Tom Jones "It's Not Unusual" arranger.) My first reaction on looking at the cover title was "yik" (I mean Noël Coward favourites?). Les has great imagination and a sense of humour, which he shows off here, that reminds me of the best of Billy May

I'M ON MY OWN WAY
JOSH WHITE JR.
Mercury MCL 20067

This is how folk should sound. My favourite is "Turn Around". All the heart strings are given a good tug, and this man plays the guitar, not as an instrument but as a way of talking

Pye CRL 4510

I recommend this LP to all groups who have a mouth organist in their midst. This is how it should be "did"

SARAH VAUGHAN SINGS THE MANCINI SONGBOOK
Mercury MCL 20059

This is definitely the LP of the month. Great arrangements. Fantastic singing. My particular favourites are "Peter Gunn", "Charade", "It Had Better Be Tonight". With all this super sound and the trouble that everybody has taken musically what a pity the cover is so drab and gives no indication of the excitement inside

TRINI LOPEZ, THE RHYTHM & BLUES ALBUM
Reprise R 6171

Though this is a marvellous party disc, all the numbers have been done better by somebody else, for instance, Lulu's version of "Shout" works better as a rave-up than the easier swinging version on this LP
* Her least favourite

EV'RYTHING'S COMING UP DUSTY
Philips BL 632 340

Wow!! Cecil B. DeMille presents... 12 pages of pics and info. on the great Dusty. I played this over and over and it's terrific, fantastic, marvellous, but something worried me. I couldn't put my finger on it so I played the LP to my recording manager, Mike Margolis, who straight away said, "The arrangements are not attuned to her voice." I think he's right, but I think it is one of the best things issued this year, and well worth 37s 6d

THE VERY BEST OF THE EVERLY BROTHERS
Warner Bros W 1554

This is a collection of all their best hits and when you listen to it the reason for their success jumps off every track. The sound is so clear and easy on the ear. I must say that I prefer all these tunes to the numbers they choose now

MARIO & FRANCO

BARONS OF THE FOOD BELT

MOST Italians become waiters. And all waiters want to open their own restaurant. We did." Franco laughs and talks about what it's like to be part of a team of two very different people who run two of the most talked-about restaurants in London.

Mario was Head Wine Waiter and Franco was Head Waiter.

Mario

They met at Hatchetts and then seemed to become a team. Next stop was Mirabelle's. One day, Mario announced that he'd saved up £1,000. "Wine waiters always get bigger tips" laughs Franco.

Franco threw £800 into the pot and they started to look around for premises. They finally found a small Italian club that was willing to sell the lease for £500. Mirabelle's gave them an old stove, an old fridge and 3 settees. They did the decor themselves and the first Trattoria Terrazza was open for business.

Good food that's different from everybody else's has always been their strength and life keeps getting better. Once the Trat got going, they opened the Tiberio where the prices differ but the food doesn't. In quality, anyway. Franco says "you get to a point where you have two main worries. First, you wake up in the morning and you worry about the menu, the food, the service, the waiters. Then you start worrying about accounting. But how many Rolls-Royces can a man want!" He pauses a moment and then adds "so we'll open another restaurant. Always it's Italian. But this one will be different." Mario points to the tiles "you like them? our customers want to buy them so we import them from Italy!"

It's hard to believe that Franco is actually an Englishman. Well, he was born in London. Mario is the jolly Neopolitan. Sharp, but always smiling. Their double act is very impressive: a combination of casual calm and bustling energy.

Mario doesn't talk much but he does spend his time jumping from one restaurant to the other. "Twenty minutes at the Trattoria, twenty minutes at the Tiberio. Your customers have to see you. And I have to see what's going on!"

"We're not in the gimmick business. Nor do we rely on themes. What we have to offer is good food. Food that's different. Food that you can rely on." Franco says that this principle applies to practically everything that's successful in Britain today. "Gimmicks die. Quality doesn't." He says you have to stand on merit to get anywhere now. The second-rate won't sell anymore. It shows up in everything that people accept now. In the theatre, in fashion, in food. Even in drink. People drink vodka now. Cossack Vodka. Because it's a good drink. Cossack Vodka because it doesn't overwhelm people. Cossack Vodka because it leaves them a choice of being able to mix it with anything.

Mario and Franco should know what they're talking about. They've built their success on providing the good things that Britain wants. And Cossack Vodka's doing the same thing.

The Club's Good Food Guide (published by Consumers' Association and Cassell) has 1,600 entries covering the whole country. In this weekly section London Life will list and describe most of the reputable London restaurants in the course of the year. C.S. = Closed Sundays

INDIAN

ASHOKA RESTAURANT, 22 Cranbourn St, WC2 (TEM 5536). Mr Aziz. Meals served 12-12. The set lunch (7s 6d), or dinner (11s 6d) at the Ashoka is a good introduction to Punjabi cooking. There is a reasonable choice each day, and the range of pickles and chutneys included with the set meals should be indulged in with moderation—some of them are pretty fiery. The à la carte is short (a good sign in an Indian restaurant) and from it the speciality, Kashmiri chicken, is well worth 6s 6d. Licensed: bottled beers, iced lagers

ASIA GRILL, 26 Pembridge Rd, W 11 (PAR 5568). Mr Inder Jit. Dinner 6-11 45. Set in a dismal area this Oriental eating house has made a name for itself because the quality of the meat in its curries is good, and because they maintain a consistently reasonable standard. The biriani, brinjal gosht, chicken Danshak, paraka and poppadums are worth trying and reasonably priced

CEYLON TEA CENTRE, 22 Lower Regent St, SW 1 (WHI 8632). Tea Bar 10-6 30; Sat 10-1; C.S. Tea Lounge 12-2 15, 3-6 15; closed Sat and Sun. There are so few places in London where one can get a good afternoon tea that this tea house is mentioned partly for that fact alone. It does it very nicely, too. Also lunch and elevenses, and if you want something not too heavy, an early dinner as well. Of course you must have tea (1s: spiced, mint, cinnamon, orange, lemon, etc) with everything. Good original salad mixtures (about 20 varieties from 1s to 2s 6d) and tip-top pâtisserie. There is a Ceylon Curry in the winter. Only the greedy need spend more than 10s on their lunch

KARACHI, 164 College Rd, Harrow, Middlesex (UND 3303). Abu Sufian. Dinner 6-11 30. The Karachi is possibly the best place of any type to eat in Harrow. It has become very popular recently and is a useful addition to the tiny but growing list of restaurants in suburbs, worth a detour. Its range of dishes is long enough to please most tastes while not being so long as to suggest vats of curry sauce and tins and packets behind the scenes. Biryanies (5s to 7s 6d), pilaws (4s 6d to 7s), curries 4s (kofita) to 7s 6d (bhoona lobster). Licensed

LIGHT OF INDIA, 59 Park Rd, NW 1 (PAD 6753). S M Khan. Dinner 6-12. Someone once estimated that there were more than 300 Indian restaurants in London alone. Precious few of them have any individuality, but this friendly place is one of that few. The curries range from mild (chicken and mutton pulaws for 9s 6d and 8s 6d respectively) through medium (rhogan 5s 6d) to the ferocious Bangalore phal mutton or chicken (5s 6d and 6s 6d). Wines from 14s 6d, by the glass 2s 6d; lagers on ice a much wiser choice

LIGHT OF INDIA, 284 King St, W 6 (RIV 2579). B Mukerjee. Dinner 6-midnight. A useful place for Hammersmith residents, who have precious few places worth visiting in their area. It is a clean and tidy restaurant with good service and well presented food. Prawn patia (6s 6d), mutton Danshak (8s), chicken vindaloo (5s 6d) are full of flavour; Bangalore phal dishes (mutton 6s, chicken 7s) strictly for seasoned curry fans. Give them notice and they will do Murgh Mussallam (£3 10s for 4 persons) whatever that might be. Licensed: lager 2s 6d

NEW DELHI, 13 New College Parade, Finchley Rd, NW 3 (PRI 9976). Dinner 6-12. A small restaurant with blown-up pictures of Himalayan scenes on the walls; it is very clean, it is often crowded. The mutton, chicken and vegetable curries are good eating here; the lamb biriani and rhogan gosht excellent value. You should be able to eat well for less than 10s a head. Licensed: well-cooled lager

SHAH RESTAURANT, 124 Drummond St, NW 1 (EUS 1490). Mr Shah. Meals served from noon to 11 p.m. Shah's has been most people's favourite Indian restaurant, at some time or the other, for what seems like donkey's years. It is still not very prepossessing, still cheap, and still a favourite with Indian students who want a nostalgic whiff of home cooking. There is the usual range of curries between 2s 6d and 8s 6d of which the chicken korma (6s), prawn and spinach curry (5s 6d) or the mutton vindaloo (a killer, 4s 6d) are good eating. They will fetch wine, if you want

SRI LANKA, 19 Childs St, SW 5 (FRE 4116). J C Silva. Meals 12-3; 6-midnight; Sat & Sun noon to midnight. Ceylonese food outside Ceylon is rare, and Sri Lanka is possibly Europe's only example of a Ceylonese restaurant. The dishes are Indian-sounding in name, and have a slightly milder taste, but it is still worth asking the waiter to suggest a meal rather than flounder helplessly with the wrong sort of mixtures. You might like to start with the risam (clear pepper soup 1s), then harak mas (a beef curry 5s), badapu isso (fried prawns 6s 6d) or pittu fish (6s 6d), with this you can have hot fried onion sambal or the milder pol sambala, both 1s. Kiri saha pani (curd with honey) for pudding. All wines under 20s; by the glass 2s 6d. Joss-sticks and candlelight

STAR OF INDIA, 154 Old Brompton Rd, SW 5 (FRE 2901). W Sugar. Dinner 6-12 (Sunday 7-11 30). Another small, crowded and spotlessly clean place offering high standard food, and swift and competent service. Ceylon chicken (7s 6d), mutton korma (5s 6d), prawn patia (7s), Persian pulaws (8s 6d and 9s 6d) and mutton Madras (quite strong, 5s 6d), all well prepared and satisfying. No half-portions here, so don't order too much. Licensed: iced lager

VEERASWAMY'S, 99 Regent St, W 1 (REG 1401/3). Sir William Seward. Dinner 6-12 (Sunday 7-10 30). You enter this restaurant from Swallow St, at the Piccadilly Circus end of Regent St. Sir William, in his endeavour to make his restaurant the most authentic Indian eating place in Britain, travels all over India seeking new recipes and new inspirations. The result of his journeyings is good, if expensive, Indian cuisine. The menu is short: set lunch 18s 6d; set dinner 21s, and a brief list of à la carte main dishes costing up to about 17s. The atmosphere is more of Delhi, 1900, than 1965—but none the worse for that. Licensed: wines rather dear; lager on draught; fruit cup 5s

CHINESE

CHEUNG CHOW, 186a Broadhurst Gdns, NW 6 (MAI 7548). Meals served from 12 midday to 11 30. This is a small, clean Chinese restaurant almost on top of West Hampstead tube station. There is a range of set meals, starting with a 4s 6d lunch, which should suit every pocket. For only 7s 6d you can sate yourself on sweet and sour pork, beef chop suey, pancake roll and fried rice, and have a pot of tolerable tea or coffee thrown in. The service is quick and polite; the food kept hot on individual hot plates. Licensed

CHINESE LANTERN, 4 Thackeray St, W 8 (WES 4981 & PRO 7333 in the morning). Mr Looi. Dinner only 6-10-midnight. This tiny eating house recreates a Festival Dinner in a Chinese home and is as much a sense of occasion as a dinner out. There is no choice and the meal, which will be brought to you by the Chinese waitress, will go as follows: a soup cooked on your table in little charcoal burners, a series of small dishes of pork, scampi and chicken with the usual bean sprouts, rice and noodles, then a meat savoury in paper, and afterwards lychees. All the time there is as much green tea as you want. This will cost about 26s including tea, and, of course, you must book. Don't go too often as the menu doesn't change very frequently. Take your own wine, if you must

CHINESE OVERSEAS RESTAURANT, 411 High St, E 15 (MAR 1987). Po Yan Leong. Meals from midday-11. A decent, clean little restaurant, not wildly exciting but very useful for actors and audiences going to the Theatre Royal in Stratford. The soups, sweet and sour pork (5s 6d), char-shui pork (10s 6d), pork or chicken noodles (4s 6d), fried mixed vegetables with beef (5s), are all good value. Licensed. China tea 1s

FU TONG, 29 Kensington High St, W 8 (WES 8448). C B Restaurants Ltd. From midday-11 30. The Fu Tong has been described as a sort of Chinese Caprice—cum—Mirabelle. It isn't that expensive, but nevertheless it is by no means cheap even by London's Chinese standards. To do really well ask the staff to advise you, then, if you don't mind spending a bit, you should enjoy yourself. Main dishes about 9s to 17s 6d, no half-portions. Licensed: some Chinese wines by the glass (4s) which should not be treated as a joke; they are dynamite

GOOD FRIENDS AND NEW FRIENDS, 139 & 185 Salmon La, Limehouse, E 14 (EAS 5541 & 3366). C Cheung. Meals served from 12 noon to about 11 p.m. If you want Chinese food at its best and its most authentic you must be prepared to make the journey to Limehouse. It will be well worth the trouble. Give them notice and try such specialities as the whole steamed mullet, whole stuffed duck, Chinese cheese and sausage, and the extraordinary melon soup. Even the more mundane dishes are a gastronomic revelation. A meal of extreme variety and satisfying proportions will cost about 15s to £1 per head.

No drinks; off-licence opposite Good Friends

OLD FRIENDS, 70 West India Dock Rd, E 14 (EAS 4235). Mr Lo Cheung. Meals from 11 30 a.m.-11 30 p.m. This was the first of the "Friends" restaurants, and this Mr Cheung is a cousin of the Mr Cheung who owns the other two, if you see what I mean. This is listed because the food here is more often than not in the same class as that mentioned above. If, when you arrive, you find a hole in the road, or a block of council flats, read the entry for the Young Friends. The Old Friends is threatened with imminent demolition

RICHMOND RENDEZ-VOUS, 1 Paradise Rd, Richmond (RIC 5114). Mr Young. Dinner 6-11 30. The management at the Rendezvous claim their restaurant to be the only truly authentic Peking-style eating place in London. So go here not for the more ordinary dishes which appear on every Chinese menu in London, but for the regional specialities: hot-sour soup (2s 6d), shrimps Peking-style with crispy rice and tomato sauce (10s 6d), crabmeat with asparagus (10s 6d), and abalone with bamboo-shoots and Chinese mushrooms (8s). Food kept warm on hotplates. Licensed: wine by the glass 2s 6d. Three sorts of tea, 1s

TUNG HSING, 22 North End Rd, NW 11 (SPE 5990). Y S Chen. Dinner 6-11. This restaurant (opposite Golders Green tube station) serves food of a better quality and a greater authenticity than many of its type. The accent is on Pekingese cooking, though the menu is quite varied: pork spare ribs, sliced fish with bean shoots, Hung-Shao pork, Yangchow meat balls, all at predictable prices; Mongolian hot-pot and the Szechuan chicken must be ordered in advance. There is a 4s lunch. Licensed

YOUNG FRIENDS, 11 Pennyfields, Poplar, E 14 (EAS 4276). Mr Cheung. Meals from noon-midnight. This is the successor to Old Friends (q.v.) which is soon to be pulled down. Like the other "Friends" restaurants, it is one of the few truly authentic Chinese restaurants in the Western Hemisphere. A meal will cost you about 15s to 20s a head, and should be absolutely splendid

GREEK

AKROPOLIS, 34 Charlotte St, W 1 (MUS 2289). Mr Stori. Dinner 6-11 30. C.S. The Akropolis (which moved from Percy Street) has a long, international and dear menu, but it is the Greek dishes on the back of the carte which have given it its reputation. Melitzanes Imam Bayaldi (aubergines stuffed with onions etc. 6s 6d), kebab (15s 6d), souvlakia (15s 6d), and the elaborate moussaka Akropolis (15s 6d) are all reliable and authentic specialities. You must be prepared to wait a little for their cooking. Greek sweets 3s. Licensed: carafes 18s

AU SAVARIN, 8 Charlotte St, W 1 (MUS 7134). Mr Chris. Mr Theo. Dinner 6-11. C.S. The cost of a meal here won't be small but it will be good value. The menu is large, the cooking good, and the helpings more than enough for normal people. The pâté (5s 6d), scampi Provençale and taramosalata (4s 6d) are good to begin with. Follow them with escalopes (Au Savarin or Bel Paese 10s 6d), or the kidneys in red wine. Good sweet trolley. The wine list is not very cheap; it does include 10 Greek wines from 22s 6d if you have acquired the taste for these; others by the carafe for 15s, by the glass 4s 6d

BEOTY'S, 79 St Martin's Lane, WC 2 (TEM 8548 & 8768). T. Frangos. Dinner 5 30-midnight. C.S. This elegant and friendly restaurant is ideal for a pre-theatre dinner. The cuisine is mainly Greek: try the avgolemono (lemon-flavoured soup, 6s 6d), dolmadakia (stuffed vine leaves, 6s 6d), moussaka Khrokitis, and afterwards the bakhlava (a pastry with honey and nuts); main dishes from about 12s 6d. The coffee is unlimited; the service friendly. Licensed: Greek wines from 14s 6d; carafes of retzina 15s

BEOTY'S, 14 Wright's Lane, W 8 (WES 8525). T. Frangos. Dinner 5 30-11. C.S. This is the parent of the Beoty's mentioned above. One of its attractions is that it has a balcony which is one of the few places in London where you can eat out of doors. Similarly Greek in character; at this branch try the taramasalata (a pâté of cod roes), Cyprus stefado, or the pilaf de poulet à la Grecque. The prices are also similar. Greek wines from 14s 6d; carafes of retzina 15s

HENDON GRILL, 86 Brent St, Hendon, NW 4 (HEN 8575). Nick Haralambous. Dinner 5 30-10 30. C.S. The Hendon Grill is known locally as "Nick's"—because it is Nick who does the serving, and Mrs Nick who does the cooking. The cuisine is a sort of European mixture, with Greek food dominant: pork kebab (10s 6d), moussaka, mackerel baked in olive oil (6s 6d), and bakhlava or green figs for afterwards. Greek wines by the glass, 2s 6d. The exterior is very deceptive

KEBAB & HOMOUS HOUSE, 95 Charlotte St, W 1 (MUS 3144). George Demetriou. Meals 10 a.m.-11 30 p.m. Now that this restaurant has been signalled as one of Jean Shrimpton's favourites (London Life, 16 October) it will be impossible to get a table what with the crowds falling over themselves to watch her eat kebab. When she's not there, go and try the houmos, kebab, afelia or moussaka; a 3-course meal with Greek bread should cost no more than 15s. Greek wines; ouzo, and retzina by the glass 3s 6d; Greek sweets; Greek records

KOUZINA, 6 Vicarage Rd, Kingston-on-Thames (KIN 1336). Mr Tsentides. Dinner 6-11. C.S. This recently opened restaurant has a standard menu but offers a fair number of Greek specialities. Not only the usual ones; for something different in the Greek line try the kuppeia (savory vine leaves, 4s 6d), lamb shashliks (about 12s), psari me saladitza (fish steak, 10s 6d), and prinzola haerinez (savory pork chops, 12s 6d); kataipi (2s 6d) for sweet. Licensed: some Greek wines

NOUFARO RESTAURANT, 187 Chiswick High Rd, W 4 (TUR 9870). Mr Lymbouris. Dinner 6-11. C.S. The Noufaro specializes in mid-Oriental cuisine; as the proprietor is a Greek-Cypriot it is not very surprising that his national dishes can be found on the menu. Stuffed aubergines (9s 6d), stuffed vineleaves (10s 6d), afelia (pork in wine, 8s 6d), and for sweet, galadobourekio (1s 6d). The waiters are in national costume; after 10, guitarists sing Greek songs. Licensed: Greek and Cyprus wines from 12s or so, by the glass from 2s

NIGHT LIFE

TAVERNA MYKONOS, 3 Heath St, NW 3 (HAM 4300). Lunch (Sat only) 12-3 p.m.; dinner 6-2. The current wave of interest in things Hellenic rapidly spread to Hampstead. This taverna in the basement of a Spanish coffee bar is already one of the most popular Greek restaurants in London. The national specialities should be chosen: avgolemono (4s 6d), houmos, souvlakia (12s 6d for 3 skewers of beef on rice with onions and tomatoes), dolmades (stuffed vine leaves), and afelia. They give you Turkish delight with your Turkish coffee! Bouzouke melodies are played by the Mykonos strings. Licensed

UNITY RESTAURANT, 91 King's Rd, SW 3 (FLA 1379). Mr Alexi. Dinner 6-10.45. C.S. The Unity Restaurant has been serving Greek food to the inhabitants of Chelsea for more than 15 years, and has managed to survive the competition from all the newer bistros and eating boutiques. Dolmadakia (3s 6d), kebab (9s 6d), moussaka (9s 6d) are most reliable and excellent value. Licensed: retzina 15s; Cyprus wines from 12s 6d; by the glass 3s. The service is good

THE WHITE TOWER, 1 Percy St, W 1 (MUS 8141). J Stais. Dinner 6.45-11. C.S. The White Tower has long been one of London's most distinguished restaurants. Its menu is mostly Greek, and it is this type of food you must eat here. Taramasalata, avgolemono, stuffed vine leaves (dolmades) for the hors d'oeuvre; for a main course moussaka (18s 6d, but enormous), pilaf des fruits de mer (21s), or shashlik at the same price. The atmosphere is most agreeable and customers are never hurried, whatever the time of day. Large, well-chosen wine list; Greek house wine 18s 6d; carafes 21s

SELECTED

BARQUE AND BITE, Regent's Canal, 15 Prince Albert Rd, NW 1 (GUL 8137). Geoffrey Cassen. Dinner 7-12. Closed Sat lunch. It is interesting that mankind will go and eat meals in the bowels of the earth, at the top of a tower, or floating on the water, and pay quite a lot of money for the privilege. No doubt the psychoanalysts have an enlightening answer. If you are one of those who suffer from such compulsions the Barque and Bite will indulge your vice as well as feeding you pretty well. The pâté (5s 6d), an escalope in red wine sauce with cherries (14s 6d) and various ways with hare (from 11s 6d) are worth investigation. Wines from 13s 6d

THE DIPLOMAT, 20 Mount St, W 1 (MAY 3200). Manager: Charles Bradshaw. Dinner 7-11.45. This is Guy Gluckstein's new prestige restaurant, which he has designed to give you the finest food in as fine a setting as possible. The decor has already received some rather hard knocks (journalistically), and whether they achieve their aim with the food only time (and our pockets) can tell. Prices start at 30s for a three course table d'hôte, the cost of your meal being determined solely on the price of the main dish chosen. Only oysters and caviar are charged extra. Wines carefully chosen and priced to match the menu. Not yet proven, as a Scottish jury might say

EALING TECHNICAL COLLEGE CATERING SCHOOL, St Mary's Rd, W 5 (EAL 0162).

Principal: Mr Ceserani. Lunch M to F only, during term time. This is not a commercial enterprise; it is a practical demonstration of the lessons the students of the Catering School have learnt in the classroom. A 3-course lunch costs as little as 7s 6d (4-course 10s), and its range and quality will depend on the academic level reached by the class being taught that day. Remember you are acting as a guinea-pig and forgive the occasional mistake which may sometimes occur in the service. It is necessary to book

GEORGE AND VULTURE, 3 Castle Ct, Cornhill, EC 3 (HOP 8000 Ext 351). John Gardner (London) Ltd. Lunch only 12-3. Closed Sat and Sun. So many of the really old, or Dickensian, pubs in the City serve such beastly food that it makes a change to recommend one that doesn't. The speciality here, on Thursdays during the oyster season (now, in fact), is Pickwick Pudding, made with steak, kidney, oysters and a special seasoning. This is 10s 6d; other popular dishes are cheaper—steak (8s), chump chops (7s), mixed grill (7s 6d) and gammon rashers (7s 6d). Cheeses (the Stilton is good) and steamed puddings for afters. Rosé in carafe (9s 6d), quarter-bottles and named wines by the glass from 4s; Ind Coope on draught. The George gets very busy by 12.45, and it is important to remember that bookings are taken only before 12.30 p.m.

TRAFALGAR TAVERN, Park Row, Greenwich, SE 10 (GRE 2437). Manager: Laurent Salerno. Dinner 7-11. This house, near the Royal Naval College, right on the edge of the river, has been newly restored at great expense and has a suitably naval decor. The bars are named after famous admirals; it has all been done rather well. Decor has to be paid for, so that the food, while very good, is not cheap. Oeufs Bénédicte (8s 6d), white-bait (7s 6d), kidneys in red wine (15s 6d), tournedos Hélène &c.; vegetables are extra. Wines served in silver goblets. Early days yet, the Trafalgar only opened last July, but on present showing I hope it keeps its promise

THE WHITE HOUSE, Albany St, NW 1 (EUS 1200). Manager: Lino Armani. Dinner 6.30-11. C.S. Oddenino's are making something good, but expensive, out of this restaurant set below the big, slightly yellowed, White House flats. Try the quenelles of sole (10s 6d), chicken André Simon (24s), filet de boeuf Lucullus (104s for 4 persons) or the sardines in mint, for a miserly 10s 6d. It isn't absolutely necessary to spend so much, but probably gastronomically more enjoyable. There is a large wine list to suit most tastes and purses

WOLFE'S, 11 Abingdon Rd, W 1 (WES 6868). David Wolfe. Dinner 7-11.45. C.S. Wolfe's is a long, narrow restaurant, rather cramped but managing in spite of this to produce some of the most distinguished cooking in London. Mr Wolfe is a wine merchant, as well as a restaurateur. He is there in the evening and will give very sensible advice as to what to drink with the food he offers. The offerings have included lamb cutlets Ingrid (14s 6d), poussin au romarin (24s 6d for 2), 24 fresh snails for 34s and trout in red wine (14s 6d). It is the proprietor's avowed policy to shun tinned and frozen vegetables. Extensive wine list; carafes of Rioja (whole bottles) 12s 6d; by the glass 3s

A selective list of nightclubs, restaurants with entertainment or dancing, discothèques and gaming clubs

Outside your cabin window the transatlantic skies stream by. Next stop, New York. Inside, this is India. Rustling from seat to seat, your golden-skinned sari-clad hostess offering champagne and caviar*. At your side — a decor of golden gods and dancing maidens: gaudy elephants bearing the pampered Maharajah. You get the message; this is the way to fly West. Ask your Travel Agent! The fan? Just a polite Eastern gesture.

Christmas double!

Here's the ideal Christmas present for people with an eye for colour, a feeling for history, a love of country life and a sense of occasion.

The Illustrated London News Christmas Number is not just a magazine made to look seasonal. It's a work of art in itself.

It includes 24 pages of superlative colour, together with a front cover reproducing Canaletto's breathtaking painting of Westminster Abbey. The latter ties in with a feature written to mark the Abbey's 900th anniversary. Then there will be over seven pages of colour on Royalty as artists, with paintings by Queen Victoria, the daughters of George III, and the Duchesses of Kent and Gloucester; a feature on how artists over the centuries have painted the River Thames; colour features on the Iranian Crown Jewels and animals of the Antarctic.

Holly Leaves will have something to interest you whoever you are. In colour, there's a decorative arrangement of the signs of the Zodiac: two pages of specially commissioned paintings of pheasants, by Dr Eric Ennion: a picture by Peter Biegel, the sporting artist, of the ride home after a day's hunting; a feature on Sussex church porches, and paintings of Joan of Arc, Herbertonford village in Devon, and the tinsel glamour of the Punch & Judy show. Black and white features include illustrated articles on the Witches of the North Country, Gamekeepers of the old days, Balloons and Airships, Engraved Glassware from the fourteenth to the nineteenth centuries, Thatching in East Anglia—and a Countryman's Quiz.

The Christmas Numbers of The Illustrated London News and Holly Leaves cost only 6s each including post. You owe it to yourself—and your friends at home and overseas—to enjoy this marvellous Christmas Double. An evening is one of the easiest things in the world to lose.

One careless moment and—pfft!—the day's gone and you are plunged into night.

Evenings are to be savoured, cherished, prolonged. And Evening People say that quite the best way to savour, cherish and prolong your evenings is to welcome them with a Beefeater gin.

You'll find Beefeater enticingly agleam with taste, light as the wild blue yonder, dry as wit.

Where do these evening-perfecting qualities come from? Do we have some singular way of making Beefeater gin?

We do. We pluck delectable juniper berries from just one district high in the Italian Tyrol. We cull fragrant coriander seeds from mysterious corners of Essex. We garner orange, angelica—and other herbs and spices too secret to name—from a dozen places between Seville and Samarkand.

We blend them to a recipe handed down in the Burrough family these 140 years—and heaven help anyone who splits on it. Beefeater is distilled three times, instead of the usual twice, using water drawn from our own pure and silvery spring.

That is why Beefeater has such an enticingly gleaming taste. And why it is absolutely essential to the start of any self-respecting evening. Evening People's evenings, anyway.

The Rape of Europa (oil on canvas 23½ in. by 27½ in.), by William Etty (1787-1849) from the exhibition which opens on 1 November at the Maas Gallery, 15a Clifford Street, W 1. Etty is known best for his richly fleshy nudes, transferred rather improbably from the life class to some imaginary natural setting. This picture in the manner of Delacroix, with its sense of movement and warm colouring, is much livelier than most. At one point in the 1920s and 1930s, Etty's works could be bought in London for less than £100. He is now restored to fashion. Last year, Lord Sandwich sold Etty's Leda Reclining at Christie's for £3675. See Galleries, page 15.

Robert Carrier by Pauline Peters

Robert Carrier lunching. Nine guests. Say a couple of hours on aperitifs. Then four courses, three bottles of Puligny Montrachet, five of Corton, a little brandy. And at seven when the lamps are lit in his very scarlet drawing room, when everybody wonders what happened to the afternoon, the party breaks up: one faction headed by Carrier, goes on to an At Home, then a party somewhere else. Around two he comes back to the house in Gibson Square and makes for the fridge. A little something before bed, an egg, a hunk of cheese perhaps. And tomorrow he awakes at 7.30 bright as a button.

Robert Carrier is 41, big but not fat at the moment because he has been dieting. For six years he has been a cookery writer, first in Harper's, now in the Sunday Times and Vogue. He is hoping that his second book of recipes, due out on 4 November will be as successful as his first—which has already sold 50,000 copies at £4 4s each, and there are four foreign editions to come.

Robert Carrier — he has another corpulent volume out for Christmas

His style is a kind of Yankee baroque, too lush for some palates.

"He's all for the flambé flame that reaches out and nearly sings him."

"He doesn't understand the chemistry of cooking, what digests with what."

"He's a bachelor's dream—he's for a man who wants to make a big production once in a blue moon."

"I admired him when he first appeared. I thought he was an original. But he's done so much. Elizabeth David's more civilized. There's nothing vulgar about her."

"Bob's one of the nicest people I know"—this last from Eileen Dickson who found him in Brook Street when she was editor of Harper's. "We just smiled the way one does when one passes someone every day. Then we met at Claridge's so we hello-ed and eventually I said why don't you write something for us. It was really he who made cooking chic and exciting." Carrier himself says "I'm just on the threshold of knowing. I want to go back over everything I've ever written and select, reject, simplify until I get something quite extraordinary. Food shouldn't be full of tricks and gimmicks, but it shouldn't be bound by tradition. Life changes, so must food. But I've got two battles. One for simplicity and another to get people interested, to make my cooking within the scope of someone who isn't a professional cook."

There is a young French chef whom he admires a lot. "He is all for simplicity. He extracts the original essence out of every dish. His gratin dauphinois is the best I've tasted. He puts nothing in it and it's superlative."

Carrier has a second career, running a public relations firm which has an annual turnover of £148,000. He started with a cornflour account and got everyone to cook Chinese food which needs a lot of cornflour. Now he has accounts for linoleum, vinyl, apples and pears—but he is careful about using too many apples and pears in his recipes in case people think he is being unethical.

He has a good life: a lot of parties and people and stamina and never any washing up. "I'm a very sloppy cook. I use a lot of spoons and saucepans and things. My valet's very good. He goes round after me." He never has hangovers either because of the bed-time snacks.

He garages a Thunderbird at Nice Airport so he can get from the front door of his house in Islington to the front door of his house at St. Tropez in three hours flat. He does it about eight times a year. He has two more houses in New York but he visits the States only once every two years. He left New York when he was 19. The US army sent him to Europe and after the war he hopped about, being a PRO for the French Government, running radio programmes, editing a propaganda newspaper for de Gaulle. He acted and directed in Paris, went on tour in Germany, sang and danced with a touring company in Italy and had parts in a couple of films. The best bit of all this was the Existentialist period in Paris—he was one of the first Americans there after the war. At this time he met Curnansky, a chef known in France as a "prince of gastronomes." He is currently editing a volume of Curnansky's work.

He went through a bad patch one winter at St. Tropez. "I had what I call my quote, nervous breakdown, end quote. I was just drinking all night sleeping all day, feeling a failure, a bum. Then a woman called Fifine, who ran a small restaurant, started to persuade me to get up at dawn to go to market with her. She got me out of the rut and it was she who really set me on this path of food".

He came to England to see the Coronation. "I thought it would be my kind of show." Then, for a while, he earned his living concocting diets for dogs for someone in Pimlico. He stopped that when he started the PR firm with two men who have since died. He also has a small photographic firm which specializes in food pictures. In the past three months he has been offered the control of three restaurants. "The idea tempts me. But I want to travel." He is going round the world some time in November looking at great restaurants. "Perhaps some day I might have a restaurant—but it would have to be on my own terms. I'd run it like a private house with only one meal every evening—no choice at all. Then everything would be perfect. I think it would go down well."

He was in partnership with Wolf Mankowitz when the Pickwick restaurant opened. "But I got bored with it after two months so I quit. It was great fun while it lasted though. I worked in the kitchen for a bit when we had a crisis on. Little girls from Vogue used to trip in with proofs screeching with horror 'Oh Mr. Carrier what are you doing here?' You've got to stay with a restaurant all the time if you want to keep the standard up.

"Everything I do is to please me. I am my judge and my public. Writing I hate. It's such an effort. I started by hiding myself in a back room in Knightsbridge because that's what I heard you were supposed to do." Occasionally his copy gets cut. "They don't always have space for the personal bits I put at the top of the recipes. I don't mind in the slightest. I get my revenge. I just put it all back in the books, then nobody can cut it."

He isolated himself completely from all his friends for three months when he was writing the first book. "It was an imposition because I do love my friends. But perhaps I'm not a very good friend. I'd love you all the time, but if you weren't there I'd make no contact. I'd never write you. I'd think of you a lot and I'd feel warm and generous towards you, but unless you got to know me very well you wouldn't be aware of that, so you'd think I'd cooled.

"I like the English. They're unpretentious and gentle. One can be private here."

He thinks it is quite crafty of him to have a good business sense and a marked visual sense. But in the end the funny thing about Robert Carrier is that he says he likes sober suits and sandwiches.

Art Nouveau —and the man who can't help collecting

Two manifestations of Art Nouveau will appear concurrently in London in November. At the Arts Council gallery in St. James's Square, an exhibition of Belgian works of the period opens this weekend. At the Grosvenor Gallery in Davies Street, an exhibition of works from the collection of Martin Battersby, the painter and interior decorator, opens on 18 November.

Battersby has made a modest fortune out of this style of decoration which flourished from the 1880s until the First World War. He talks about it like an intelligent punter who has studied form carefully and feels a satisfying glow when his horse comes in first. Ten years ago, when he began collecting, the style was almost totally neglected. Even Liberty's, who patronized many of the English artists of the movement, had lost interest in it.

"I saw it was bound to come back because of the swing of the pendulum," Battersby says. "We're using up all the periods so quickly. When I started collecting there was not all that much Art Nouveau about. I bought everything I saw. Two years ago, when my collection was shown at the Brighton Museum, I put what I thought were ridiculously high values on everything. By the end of the exhibition, those prices were the prices on the market.

"They have gone up fantastically even in the past few months. I was offered a Tiffany lamp in New York for about £180. That same model has since been sold for £1000."

His large flat in Brighton is thick with the luxuriant growths of the period. Battersby, a slim, tanned, grey-haired man, picks his way nimbly past drooping lamp-standards and trays shaped like water-lilies, looking like a horticulturalist pruning orchids in a hot-house. The walls are papered with designs of the period ("That's a design called The Lovebirds—Cecil Beaton used it in the film of My Fair Lady upside-down!"). He even wears an Art Nouveau tie which he has designed himself. He is about to open a shop in Brighton which sells tablecloths, furnishing fabrics, wallpapers, even underwear in the style of the period.

He began his career training to become an architect, says he found the austere style of the inter-war period unsympathetic, and took up interior decoration. He now specializes in trompe l'oeil designs. His Florentine rooms, with illusory views across the River Arno and false fireplaces, strike some responsive chord especially among very rich Americans, who like to adorn their homes and even their boardrooms with these romantic curiosities.

He enjoys playing mild practical jokes on his clients. The president of one bank in Milwaukee has yet to discover that one of the volumes painted on a fake bookshelf in the directors' dining-room is "Les Memoires de Mademoiselle Francoise Colline," roughly the French for Fanny Hill.

He also paints smaller trompe l'oeil panels which supposedly symbolize the life or character of the subject. Mrs. David Bruce, the wife of the American Ambassador in London, has appeared as a Sphinx. Mr. John Profumo, when he was Minister of War, was depicted as a victorious Roman general. Lady Carnarvon, the former Cochrane dancer Tilly Losch, has a painted panel showing photographs of her in her days as an entertainer. It was a gift from Mrs. Paul Mellon and is surmounted by the legend "Remember Tilly Losch".

Battersby is designing an appropriate period setting for the Grosvenor exhibition of about 200 of his pictures and objects. He is now starting to collect another, later period in the reasonable expectation of pulling off a double.

"I'm a natural magpie," he says. "I can't help collecting. I wish I didn't. One of these days I'm going to sell everything and put all the money in the bank and sit in a bare Japanese room and gloat over it."

Hello. This is She...

The phone rings in Sharon Tate's garden flat in Eaton Square. She answers: "Hello. This is She". She (right) is 22 and has just begun on her first film role in J Lee Thompson's 13, a thriller about modern Druids. Her arrival in films has not been unprepared. "Oh dear," she says, "I've told this story so often I've got no continuity left. Anyway, I was in a Los Angeles studio testing for a commercial and Martin Ransohoff happened to see me there. He said 'Take that girl out, we're going to put her in films.'"

Ransohoff put her to school. Dancing, voice training, singing, body building ("to learn how to carry yourself with an upper look at the world"). It took three years and cost a million dollars.

HOW FAR WILL TERRY SOUTHERN GO? by Francis Wyndham.

The film of The Loved One has opened in America to scandalized reviews. "MGM aren't at all happy. Now they want to cut it but they can't. So they are in a quandary." Terry Southern, part-author of the script, has apparently "gone too far" again. Or has he?

Illustration by Anthony Cobb

BETWEEN the ages of 16 and 18, Terry Southern wrote all of Nathaniel Hawthorne's stories and about half of Edgar Allan Poe's.

"They never seemed to me to go quite far enough, you know, there was something a little stuffy about them, I guess they were just too subtle. I made them get really going." And since then his literary career has been dedicated, it seems, to one ideal: going too far. Like all ideals, this one is unattainable, and Southern has already found that to go too far is only to discover that there's always further to go.

He was born in Texas 41 years ago, the son of a pharmacist. "At first I was going to be a doctor like my grandfather, but that was during the war and I went into the army before finishing my medical studies. Right after the war I was in Paris on the GI bill. I got 75 dollars a month for a little over a year and then I had to depend on getting money from my parents and on the kindness of strangers, as they say."

Southern belonged to a group of American intellectuals living in Paris after the war who echoed, perhaps consciously, the expatriate pattern of Hemingway, Fitzgerald and Co 30 years before. Their official organ was The Paris Review, in which many of Southern's short stories appeared. At this time he was reading Céline, Malaparte and Kafka, whom he admires as a great comic writer. After completing and destroying three novels, he came across the work of Henry Green. "I had been moving, I think, towards a style like his and he had taken it so far beyond what I had been doing that it suddenly gave me an insight into what I was trying to do, and I discarded what I was working on at that time and wrote Flash and Filigree. It went around the American publishers for a year and they all rejected it, and then I sent it to Henry Green and he liked it and sent it to Andre Deutsch who published it in England. Later it was done in the States as well."

Flash and Filigree was well reviewed but sold badly and made only a mild impression on the literary scene of 1958. It is still Southern's favourite among his own books: "It's the most ambitious, and the parts that succeed are the most satisfying I guess." The Magic Christian, a short episodic book which was published the following year, fell even flatter with the public and was not particularly well reviewed—though a section of it won the Paris Review contest "for the encouragement of humorous fiction." Both novels went rapidly out of print.

During the 1950s, it was almost conventional for an impecunious English-speaking writer in Paris to produce at least one pornographic novel for Maurice Girodias of the Olympia Press. This was a way of making a little extra money roughly equivalent to reviewing for the English weeklies, or taking part in The Critics on BBC. Southern wrote Candy in collaboration with another American, Mason Hoffenburg, under the pseudonym of Maxwell Kenton. The book has since become notorious. At one point, early on in its career, it was banned by de Gaulle—only to re-emerge, word for word the same but with an alternative title: Lollipop. Since then its publishing history has been complicated by legal wrangles over pirated editions, creating an atmosphere suitable to its subject: for it is intended, half-seriously, to be a pastiche of Voltaire's Candide.

WE got about 350 dollars each for Candy, in dribbles. It was very hard to get money out of Girodias because of the nature of his affairs. Mason did about a third of the total. You know we had a sort of falling-out about the book later, and recently I looked at the pages to check and that's what it turned out to be. Mason did most of the Jewish thing, you know the whole sequence about Krankie's relationship with his mother; he knows that scene very well. You see, I had started it; I wrote the hunchback episode as a short story, complete in itself. Then I thought it would be good to go on with it, because it seemed like this girl could have other adventures, and then I started on another one and finally I showed it to him, you know the way you would show a friend a manuscript, and he had some ideas and I said, 'Oh yeah, that's great, let's write it together.' It was like when you tell someone a joke, you know, and then they tell you a joke. Generally speaking the attempt was to sort of alternate, the way you would in this word game where one person does a word and hands it to another person and it gradually alters. We'd do that with scenes. There was the period when we were living in Paris at the same time and then another when we were both living some place in the South of France so that we could actually physically exchange these things, and then we separated when I went to Switzerland and it would be in the form of letters and it stretched out, fagged out . . . It took about a year, very leisurely done. And then in the end I rewrote the whole thing to give it a kind of, you know, uniformity of style."

Terry Southern at this time was a Bohemian figure, with a reputation for unreliability. He lived for a while in Geneva and then, with his wife Carol and his son Nile, returned to the United States. The fame of Candy had spread to make him an underground celebrity, but he was still very poor. Many attempts to help him were made but few succeeded. "Terry's really hopeless now," one used to hear. "Bob Silvers fixed for him to interview Lotte Lenya in Show magazine, but he just got high and never showed up." Instead, he published an "Interview with a Male Nurse Faggot" in The Realist, a "satirical" American publication mainly devoted to sick jokes about Caroline Kennedy. His conversation—always halting—became more and more oblique. He might answer in hip language, or in a joke English accent, or with an oddly emphatic and almost incomprehensible mixture of the two. Then Stanley Kubrick read The Magic Christian.

"Well he, you know, liked it, so that, after he'd been working for six months on Doctor Strangelove as a melodrama, when he decided to treat it as something absurd, to make it, you know, a comedy, then he asked me to work on it with him . . ."

Strangelove with the author of the original book and with Kubrick himself. As in the case of Candy and Mason Hoffenburg, a certain amount of mystery and ill-feeling surrounded the question of who actually wrote what; in some quarters, it was felt that Southern might have been hogging more than his fair share of credit. But there can be no doubt that many of the funniest lines and ideas both in Candy and Strangelove were his. The success of the film coincided with the publication of Candy (sheltered by distinguished testimonials as to its being a "serious work of satire") in the States, where it soon became Number One on the best seller lists. Southern was in the money.

HE was also in demand by other film companies. He worked on an early adaptation of The Collector, in which (as prescribed by the producers) Miranda escaped from her cellar. The film was to end with an idyllic love scene between Miranda and a new young man in some rural setting. Then the camera was to recede, gradually revealing the house of her imprisonment in the background, to which she had compulsively, pathologically returned . . . Columbia turned down Southern's version. But by this time he was busy "talking story with Tip Top Tony." Tony Richardson had asked him to work on his film of The Loved One.

Evelyn Waugh's elegant assault on the American way of death was written in 1948. This ironic masterpiece links the Wagnerian motifs of Love and Death in a Mozartian divertissement. To joke about burial and cremation, disease and dissolution, is to outrage the most profound of all taboos and to provoke an hysterical reaction, which will take the form either of laughter or disgust. Waugh's novel is a shapely monument to "bad taste" on which it would be hard to improve.

Not so very long ago, a scriptwriter hired to adapt this work for the screen would have been required to tone it down. Today, of course, he is expected to make it even more outrageous than before—to make it, if possible, downright offensive. Several writers

The London scene, eleven variations

Looking suitably surprised - Gregory Peck in his role as an American professor of ancient languages for Stanley Donen's new comedy thriller Arabesques. Predictably enough, the film is about Arab spy rings. Peck, who stars with Sophia Loren, has now returned to America

Most of the syndicate of show-business people who backed the In-Place, the night-club where Ann-Margret (below) danced at last month's opening, have quit. They disagreed with the majority shareholders' decision to make the club much less exclusive - at first membership was open only to people invited by a syndicate member. Majority shareholders include Mrs. Anne Bloom, wife of former washing-machine magnate John Bloom. Executive directors who have resigned are Burt Bacharach, David Bailey, Norman Bognor, Georgia Brown, Sidney Furie, Felice Gordon, John Heyman, Dudley Moore, Jean Shrimpton and Terence Stamp. They are withdrawing their financial backing (original capital was £70,000). And the 'In' has been dropped. The name is now The Place

Terry de Havilland's is the newest name on the shoe market. He is 27 and looks more like a happy Rugby forward than a fast-thinking designer whose ideas are suddenly in demand. Sells to Susan Locke Boutique and Valentines, Bedford, but the West End shops want such quantities that his father's tiny factory can't keep up

Marc Bolan may be the first pop singer to be called after a misprint. His manager invented the name Bolam for him, but there was a typing error in his Decca contract. So they said: "What the hell, we'll call him Bolan." His first record, The Wizard, is out on November 15 - an eerie lyric written by himself

Dancer Sheila O'Neill returns to the London stage on November 4 in a new musical, How Now Brown Cow, at the New Lyric, Hammersmith. Her dancing is dynamic and modern - "I'm not a wafty lady at all." On stage she moves so fast one rarely gets a good look at her witty face and neat cap of blonde hair

Peggy Moffitt is the favourite model of American designer Rudi Gernreich. They were in London for the Sunday Times Fashion awards. She has been Gernreich's only model for four years. Wears fantastic red eye make-up and says: "I get lots of fan mail from women "

How-old is a star? It depends on the studio make-up man ... Here John Mills (below left), normally a sprightly 57, turns octogenarian for his part in Brian Forbes' black comedy The Wrong Box. And Dirk Bogarde (below right), real age 44, plays a venerable gentleman in evening dress for Modesty Blaise. He plays the arch villain Gabriel. Both films are in production now

Two men who have brought literary success to the level of precision engineering - Dominique Lapierre (standing) and Larry Collins, joint authors of Is Paris Burning? Their book about the Liberation has become the biggest, most expensive film ever produced in France. It took three years and 20 researchers to write, has sold 500,000 hard-back copies. Next topic to come from the electric typewriters and microfilm library: a biography of the bullfighter El Cordobes

Oskar Werner plays the ship's doctor in Stanley Kramer's Ship of Fools. Werner, 42, was born in Vienna, became an actor at 17 and has been on the stage ever since. He has lived in a tiny house in Lichtenstein for 14 years. Already signed by Kramer to appear as a sadistic camp commander in his new film Andersonville

Writers in action: 1 Harold Acton by John Gross

Max Beerbohm once portrayed himself, pen in hand and with a weary little smile, murmuring thoughtfully: "Hm—I wonder if I am Incomparable." I can easily imagine Harold Acton looking equally quizzical every time he hears himself described as legendary. As it turns out, he wears his legend lightly, without flourishes. But he can't quite throw it off; an exotic, elusive aura still clings to his name.

For one thing, he is what might be called a semi-private celebrity—the spell which he cast over his intimates when he was very young has never really worked in the world at large. For another, his reputation first blossomed a long time ago, in the Oxford of Brideshead Revisited. Evelyn Waugh (who dedicated his first book to him, incidentally) has resolutely squashed the rumours linking his name with the characters of Anthony Blanch and Ambrose Silk. But he has also put on record how deeply he stood in awe of him, how much he valued his judgement—and still does.

It was Acton, as much as anyone else, who taught Waugh's Oxford generation to feel at home with the cosmopolitan artistic ferment of the 1920s. He sponsored Gertrude Stein's visit to the university, for instance. This was the famous occasion on which she announced that "everything is the same, and everything is different". (A couple of undergraduate hecklers in different parts of the audience leaped up and demanded exactly what she meant by this, to be met with the riposte: "Well, just look at you two dear boys.") The Sitwells were there, too. It was the age of cocktail-shaker modernism and poetry read through megaphones, an age which Harold Acton himself later helped to embalm in Memoirs of an Aesthete.

Since the 20s he has spent most of his time abroad. Before the war he lived in Peking and for a long time now he has made his home in one of the five villas which he owns in Florence (the other four are rented to Olivetti). He can hardly be said to have disappeared from the literary scene: he has continued to bring out novels and translations at sporadic intervals, and recently he has established a new reputation as a sober and industrious historian. But the subjects he has chosen to study—the last Medici, the last Bourbons of Naples—suggest the dying fall, the elegiac note, heighten the impression of a wistful survivor from the ancien régime.

Or so one might have thought. The very notion of him turning up in London in 1965 for the publication of a new novel struck me as incongruous, rather like a social lion of the Regency suddenly descending from exile on Victorian England. I suppose that I was expecting somebody altogether more dandified or brittle or unapproachable than the man I actually met. In the event he was amiable, direct, as conservatively turned out as a lawyer. It was his voice rather than his appearance which was immediately arresting—not just the oddities of pronunciation (he spoke about scullership and rezeach), but the whole intonation. He lingers on a syllable, falls into a faint sing-song, pauses, underlines a word for emphasis, lets his voice trail away. All this with the merest flicker of a smile, as though he were tempted to put everything he said into ironical inverted commas. It may sound rather mannered, but the effect is curiously vivid. When he began by talking about a friend who spends his summers in Florence in a brrroiling little apartment, he rolled his r's ferociously, and we sat there and broiled.

I asked him about China. He admired the people, thought that their art was unsurpassed. (Most of his own collection disappeared during the war.) The idea of the new China made him sad. But he hardly ever thought about the years in Peking now. The present was what counted; he had always tried to avoid dwelling on the past. For a moment he forgot his resolve and reminisced about Oxford. When he arrived at Christ Church it had been full of the wrong kind of aesthetes—"velveteen, you know". Then he snapped back to the present again. He was looking forward to bringing out the new novel, though he had written it primarily to amuse himself, and didn't claim to be a full-blown professional. Maddeningly, he had just discovered a particularly ignoble misprint which had escaped him in proof, "sauvity" instead of "suavity". Was proof-reading in England more slovenly than it used to be? Judging by the book-reviews you would think so; but maybe all that proved was that reviewers had become more schoolmasterly.

The conversation came zig-zagging round to English novelists. Waugh, in a class by himself. The Crouchback trilogy is the deepest thing he has done: it will still be read with pleasure in a hundred years' time. Anyone else? "Ah, I can see that you're going to ask me about that double-barrelled lady." So instead I mentioned X and Y and Z, who I thought would be more to his taste. No, too thin. Ideally he preferred elegance to scruffiness, but it wasn't essential. (Suave qui peut, as it were.)

What mattered most were traditional virtues, narrative power and meaty characterization. Kingsley Amis, now, there was someone he enjoyed. So funny, such lifelike characters.

Mostly, though, he reads history. He reeled off a list of names, Englishmen who write about Italy. Fine scullers, all of them. He was fascinated by Taylor, A. J. P. And biographies—there are so many, Phyllis Grosskurth's life of John Addington Symonds, for instance. When you look at those pictures of gondoliers, and think of that poor dying man... A splendid book: probably only a woman could have written it.

The theatre? Yes, there was a lot going on. Pinter. And Beckett, the emaciated creature. He had met him long ago, before he started writing, at Lady Cunard's—and a more corpse-like figure was never resuscitated. He wasn't certain if he liked the novels about Mahoney, was it, or Malone. But Godot was something.

The one field where he is proud not to have kept up is painting. His latest novel is a satire on the racketeering of the contemporary art world, which he thinks has grown worse. He referred approvingly to Wyndham Lewis's pamphlet, The Demon of Progress in the Arts, dropped dark hints about a critics' ramp, aimed a few kicks at his pet hate, non-representational art. In the old days one's aunt took up petit-point, now she goes abstract. And he growled about Jackson Pollock simply pumping paint on to the canvas as indignantly as any Past President at a Royal Academy banquet.

Mostly, though, he took pains to avoid the mildest whiff of old fogeydom. He was patient, open-minded, not in the least an anachronism—which also meant that one never quite saw the special quality which dazzled his contemporaries. But perhaps that was out of the question, anyway. After all, as someone or other said, every generation has to make its own mystiques.

2 The Duke of Bedford by Gerald Scarfe

The Duke of Bedford estimates that he signs his autograph some 50,000 times a year.

"It gets to be a purely mechanical thing", he says, which may take the edge off the experience of those who plan to approach him in Harrods, Hatchards and Liberty during the coming weeks for signed copies of his Book of Snobs. The Duke does not, however, believe that mere celebrity hunters appear on these occasions: "Who the hell wants to pay 21 shillings for an autograph? The people who want mine usually have some personal reason—their name is Russell, or they knew my father, or had a letter from my grandfather"

The Book of Snobs by John, Duke of Bedford and George Mikes, with illustrations by Nicolas Bentley, is published by Peter Owen, 21s. The Duke will sign copies at Hatchards, 23 November; Harrods, 5 November; Liberty, 9 November. All at 12.15 pm

SKI LIFE: OBJECTIVE CHOICE

By Harry Stone

Cutting right through the champagne air and the gentian blue skies of the travel brochures, the most suitable resorts and the most suitable months can be deduced objectively.

The choice of where to go may be reduced to two fundamentals: atmosphere and amenities. Atmosphere depends on the size of the resort, the degree of popularity it enjoys (or, to some, suffers), and the night life.

Table I, of interest to skiers and non-skiers, gives an indication of atmosphere. Resorts are divided into towns, villages and hamlets (theoretically too small to have a Church). Popularity has been indicated if the number of agents who organize parties there is six or more and a guide to the comparative night life in each resort is based on an estimate of the number of bars and places with music and dancing that stay open after midnight. Sophistication is difficult to measure, so perhaps the very "top" resorts should be given by name. They are: Cortina, Courchevel, Gstaad, Kitzbühel, Megève and St Moritz.

Especially after a night out, people may not want to spend all the time skiing. If only gentle exercise is required, curling is a pleasant, easy-going pastime for anyone up to the age of seventy. Nearly all resorts claim skating rinks, but when it comes to the point some of them are covered in snow. For the inveterate lowlander, it is nearly always possible to go for walks, except when, as in the case of Murren, the village is on a mountain shelf. But in most cases the walks are extensive, and sometimes, as at Montana, they boast superb views. Shops range from the jewellers, furriers and boutiques at the more sophisticated resorts, to the patisserie, souvenir and ski-hire only of the smaller resorts. Table II gives the skating, curling, walking and shopping possibilities, and also deals with skiing for beginners.

The non-skier, and the beginner who spends considerable time standing about, are particularly interested in the amount of sun a resort may have. A good guide for the early months is the number of hours it is physically possible for the sun to shine on the village in December (given in Table II). By mid-February, the sun is sufficiently high to clear nearly all the peaks, so that every resort may boast at least six hours.

The height of a village, usually measured from the Church, is also important in influencing snow conditions. Under 5000 ft is too low, so that snow falls are unreliable in December and up to the New Year. But below 5000 ft is usually satisfactory in January, while over 6000 ft is inadvisable as it may be too cold. 5000 ft again becomes the borderline by mid-February, and it will be necessary to go up to at least 6000 ft in March. Heights are given in Table II.

The distance from the village centre to the beginners' slopes is of prime importance to the beginner; making a trek of a quarter of a mile four times a day, carrying skis, becomes arduous, especially for children. If there are only one or two trainer lifts (lifts of under 1000 ft difference in top and bottom heights), particularly at the larger resorts, there are likely to be constant queues. If there are as many as six trainer lifts, there should be immediate service. The distance of the beginners' slopes from the village centre, and the number of trainer lifts, is also given for the resorts in Table II.

For the enthusiastic skier, it is the total height of the runs in the area which is of prime importance. 15000 ft is the minimum height that will keep the inveterate piste basher happy, but as little as 6000 ft will keep the medium skier from tedium. Queueing can be very frustrating. The queue ratio in Table III has been evolved by dividing the carrying capacity of all the lifts in the resort by the number of beds available for visitors. At the resorts, such as Courchevel and Sestriere, where accommodation is kept within a strict ratio to the facilities, there is only slight queueing at peak hours. At the traditionally popular but conservative resorts, queueing can take time (when queue ratio is less than 4).

The queue ratio is an indication only; it does not take into account the number of visitors who are non-skiers, which can be as high as 40%, nor of the crowds which flock up from the lowlands at weekends.

Aspects of the ski-slopes are also given in Tables II and III. In December, when snow falls are thin, slopes which face north are the most reliable. In January, when snow falls are substantial and it is sun that is at a premium, southern aspects are preferable. In February, especially towards the end, slopes which face south may become sticky, so slopes facing east, west and north are preferable. As the season progresses, snow on the northern aspects remains better, while, in inverse proportion, snow on the southern slopes deteriorates. In March, the lower southerly slopes are reduced to patches of brown grass.

Table IV is of interest to people with children. For the very young, several resorts provide a kindergarten, and some are English-speaking. Some even remain open at lunch time, so that parents need not interrupt a day's skiing.

Some indication of traffic is also given in Table IV—this can range from the nightmare at St Anton, where heavy vehicles travelling the length of the country wind through the village causing traffic jams, to the complete peace of Wengen and Murren, which are inaccessible to cars.

Nearly all ski schools at the bigger resorts have classes for young children, and five is not too early to join. For the older and more ambitious children, some resorts are centres for British ski clubs which run race training. Do not bank on children being able to join these, but first get in touch with the secretary, through the Ski Club of Great Britain.

TERRY SOUTHERN

were employed: the comedy team of Mike Nichols and Elaine May, the distinguished Californian expatriate Christopher Isherwood. But the results were still a little tame. One can imagine the conference between Martin Ransohoff, the producer, and Tony Richardson, the director:

"It isn't sick enough. It's got too much heart. Nobody will want to see it."

"Why don't we call in Southern?"

"Great!"

SO Terry Southern was sent off to the Chateau Marmont Hotel, Hollywood and told to hang around soaking up the atmosphere.

There was too much in the old script about the English Club and its cricket team; all that went out with the death of C Aubrey Smith. Something must be found to take its place. Terry Southern came up with a brief mention of the recent surfing craze, and two new targets for satire: astronaut-worship, and the commercial racket of retirement homes for Senior Citizens (euphemism for old people). The plot has been slightly altered. Now "The Blessed Reverend", owner of Whispering Glades Memorial Park, decides that there's more money to be made out of Senior Citizens than out of the dead. "Will somebody tell me", he asks at a Board Meeting, "how the hell to get those stiff's off my property!" Somebody does: rocket them into space. So "Resurrection . . . Now!" becomes the new slogan of Whispering Glades. (Readers of Candy will be reminded of Dr. Krankit and his book Masturbation Now!) And, while in Waugh the corpse of Aimee Thanatogenos ends up in The Happier Hunting Ground, a fashionable pet cemetery, in Southern it is confused with that of "The Condor", America's first astronaut, and reverently launched to "soar in celestial serenity throughout the farthest reaches of the universe in an orbit of eternal grace." It is "The Condor" who is cremated at the Happier Hunting Ground.

"I like the picture very much and Tony likes it but nobody else seems to," says Terry Southern. "It's very uneven in parts but that's Tony's approach, he's anti-slick you know. I don't know that it's the way I would have done it, but it has a lot of good original stuff in it and I'm certainly glad to be associated with it. I like to think the script is in the same spirit as the original, and perhaps even the way Waugh would have done it if he were writing it now. But MGM, who put up the money for Ransohoff, aren't at all happy. There's a lot of anti-clerical stuff in the picture and they figure it won't do them any good with the Legion of Decency, you know, in the States. You see they are members of the Motion Picture Association of America and by definition they can't finance a picture that hasn't got its seal. Now they want to cut it but they can't. They didn't realize until too late that in the small print of this contract Tony had with Ransohoff it gave him final and complete creative control. They were so glad to get Richardson, you know, because it was right at the peak of his Tom Jones success, that they said 'Oh yeah' never dreaming that they would have a movie on their hands where they could have absolutely nothing to say about it. So they are in a quandary."

THERE are several recognizable Southern touches in The Loved One. The television panel game, What's My Disease?, which featured in Flash and Filigree, has been momentarily revived; and the character of the mortician's Mom has been considerably altered. In the original, she was a disconcertingly abrupt old lady fond of listening to political commentaries on the radio—the joke being the contrast between Mr Joyboy's sentimental gush about his mother and her unprepossessing personality. The joke remains basically the same, but as "Momism" has become more hackneyed a subject for satire since 1948, it has been taken rather further. The following extract from the film script of The Loved One is reprinted by permission of MGM (c) 1965 by Metro-Goldwyn-

Mayer Inc, and Filmways Inc.

INT. JOYBOY'S HOUSE

Joyboy leads Aimee through a small dismal living-room to the closed door opposite. He pauses at the door as though savouring the moment of entering. A TV commercial drones on behind the closed door.

JOYBOY (happily)

This is Mom's room—it's sort of the centre of things around here.

(taps on the door)

Yoo-hoo! Mom! Are you decent?

(grins at Aimee)

No reply, only the muted sound of the commercial.

JOYBOY (joyfully)

Here we come! Ready or not! They enter. It is a small dingy room, cluttered with bric-à-brac—plaster dogs, kewpie dolls, etc., and lighted mainly by the TV screen. On the mantel is a big picture of Mom and Joyboy, heads together, grinning insanely. On the wall is a large kitchen clock with sweeping second hand, which Mom uses so as not to miss the food-commercials. The room is dominated by a large bed with a gigantic woman, MOM, in it. She is holding a remote control device with which she constantly changes stations. She has a large sheet of paper on which are written the times of the various commercials . . .

JOYBOY (with terrific pride)

Aimee . . . this is Mom! . . .

MOM (interrupting, eye on the clock)

Oh-oh, time for King Chicken!

With feverish speed she operates the remote control, and on the TV screen the stations fly past until the King Chicken commercial is reached. Mom watches it avidly, her face a mask of unspeakable desire.

JOYBOY (aside to Aimee)

Mom never misses her King Chicken commercial!

On the screen, a man tears into a chicken leg, saying "Boy-oh-boy, is this good eating!" . . .

MOM (scanning the schedule)

7.38 . . . Big Boy Crabs!

(feverishly operates station changer)

On the TV screen a commercial for Big Boy Crabs begins.

MOM (excitedly)

It's a new one, it's a new one . . .

On the screen is a shot of two soft-shell crabs on a serving platter.

MOM

Two! Two! They're using two now!

(ecstatically)

God!

JOYBOY (wistfully)

They do look good, don't they, Mom?

Mom, eyes glued to the screen, begins to move about, like a person in sexual torment.

MOM

Oh God, oh God . . .

Joyboy silently beckons Aimee to leave with him. Mom does not seem to notice their departure. In the hall, Joyboy closes the door behind them.

JOYBOY

Mom's a heck of a lot of fun, isn't she? And every inch a queen!

He stops suddenly, dabs at his eye, shakes his head.

JOYBOY (choked voice)

Sometimes it almost breaks my heart—that we can't afford to give Mom all the darn Big Boy Crabs and King Chicken she can eat!

THIS episode illustrates (if somewhat crudely) the essential formula for Southern's humour. Something or someone gets out of control and becomes exaggerated, monstrous, obscene—a situation not in itself funny. The joke is in the reactions of the observers, who assume that the situation is still under control. "It must cross the line of possibility so gradually that it doesn't seem too improbable," says Terry Southern. "It must never get fanciful." Candy, the ingenuous co-ed, is a perfect vehicle for this technique, again and again assenting to, and attempting to rationalize, the outrageous. She submits to a gynaecological examination in the men's lavatory of a Sixth Avenue bar ("Here? In the Riviera? Good Grief, I really don't think . . ."), comments philosophically but inanely on Masturbation Now! ("Well, maybe the world needs some shocking new notion like that to make men stop fighting with each other") and tries to "give herself" to the perverted Professor Mephesto ("To be needed by this great man! And to be only concerned with my material self! . . . I deny him! Oh, how did I dare?")

As Southern's work consists mainly of variations on the same joke, it is naturally best suited to the episodic form. Flash and Filigree is less a novel than a series of loosely connected incidents. The Magic Christian is even more openly episodic. Here Southern invents a rich man called Grand Guy Grand who is prepared to devote all his money and time to the most elaborate practical jokes. His humiliated victims react in various ways, but all fail to realize that a joke is being played on them: the more outrageous the hoax, the funnier their incapacity to recognize it as such. As for Candy—the dispiriting restriction of pornographic literature (its repetitive form, each chapter predictably ending in orgasm) was for him a liberation. He could be as episodic as he liked in a genre entirely dependent for its effects on variations of a single theme.

AT present, Terry Southern is writing the screenplay for The Magic Christian, to be made in England next spring. "Peter Sellers will play Grand Guy Grand and his company, Brookfield, are producing it. United Artists are putting up the money to finance it all. We're changing the scene to London—that was Peter's idea, it never occurred to me but it's surprising how interchangeable Britain and the States have become. Candy would make very little sense set in England, but with The Magic Christian it works quite well. I'm giving Grand Guy Grand a son in the movie—I'm trying to get Peter Cook for the part. The idea of the son is to give it a kind of back and forth thing, they could be vaguely in competition, you know. I mean the son will feel his father's methods a little outmoded and heavy-handed, he's more interested in the psychological approach. And they can have a sort of Arthur Miller reconciliation at the end."

He is simultaneously working on a treatment of Barbarella, Jean-Claude Forest's sophisticated comic strip which has provoked extreme reactions since it appeared between hard covers in France. Intellectuals have recognized Barbarella, whose adventures combine science fiction with eroticism, as "a truly mythic creature"; but the Minister of the Interior has forbidden the book's sale to minors and "banned it from display". Dino de Laurentiis has bought the film rights, and Jane Fonda may play the heroine—directed, of course, by Roger Vadim. Terry Southern was an obvious choice for the script.

FILMS are the great medium, it seems to me that a thing should be a movie before anything else. It's like the difference between seeing someone being hit by a car or reading about it. To see it is the next thing to experiencing it yourself. Reading about it is once again removed as you have to visualize it. It seems to me that a novel in order to justify itself has to be something beyond cinematic treatment. Like interior monologue—that's still in advance of present cinema techniques. And first person narration—where everything is seen from one point of view—that hasn't been successful in the cinema either. But other than that, it seems like if things can be done as a movie then they should. Of course, writing for movies, your dialogue is in jeopardy all the time, but on Strangelove and The Loved One the actors I've worked with have all been pure salt, they have great ears and if they miss the point of a line in rehearsal they soon get it right. That's why it's so important for the writer to be present at the shooting—I always was. But ideally—I'd like to direct; then you have absolute control, you don't have to rely so heavily on persuasion."

Terry Southern believes that a writer has got to be daring. "There's no point in beating a dead horse by repeating what has already been done. That's the difference between a professional and an artist. The professional is just trying to make a living and the artist is trying to say something which hasn't been said or do something which hasn't been done." But he realises there is a "voguish irreverence afoot" now which didn't exist when he started to write. Flash and Filigree and The Magic Christian, ignored at first, are now in Penguin; the once shocking Candy may soon be published in England. "Well, it's inevitable, isn't it? I mean, the crumbling values of our culture . . . It's very good, I think, for the general climate, this search for values to replace those that are outmoded."

THE danger, of course, is that the new values may be merely "modish". If the strength of a work of art lies in its unacceptability, simple acceptance can neatly castrate it. Terry Southern appears to be enjoying his belated success as a highly paid scriptwriter too much to worry about its more sinister implications; yet he can be vaguely apologetic for it. "I know you become very suspect when your audience becomes large. But I'm still drawn to experimental work, I still contribute to The Realist. And this novel I'm working on now, The Blue Movie, I doubt if it will have a wide appeal." The almost wistful tone suggests that Southern may retain a nostalgia for rejection. This impression is reinforced by the theme of The Blue Movie itself. The novel is still only half written, although he has been working on it for a long time. Its two subsidiary targets for satire are comparatively trivial: the adulation given to movie-directors (shades of Tip Top Tony?) and the mystique of Method acting. But its central preoccupation, though farcically treated, is more personal and more serious: how far can one go? This is an extract from Southern's own synopsis of the plot:

Boris Adrian began making films when he was 16 . . . using a rented camera and processing the film himself.

Although, until recent years, his films were regarded as strictly art-house fare, he ironically finds himself at 39 at the very top of the industry. Of his last eight films, six have won the Golden Lion at Venice or Cannes, and all have been smash box-office. His present power status could only be compared to an exaggeration of a Bergman-Fellini composite. But on several occasions his films have been banned in certain places as "obscene", or otherwise interfered with. This, has recently given rise to his own private concern with the question: At what point does the aesthetically-erotic, indefinitely extended, become offensive? Not offensive to the public, but to himself.

As it happens, the only time he mentions this speculative notion is, by chance, in the presence of Harry Krassman—film-producer, entrepreneur, and general hustler on a big scale. Harry turns up a couple of days later with his scheme for making a two-million dollar pornographic movie. His plan is based on the fact that Lichtenstein, like Monaco, is a sovereign power; i.e., its internal affairs cannot be interfered with from without. What Harry proposes is that the film be made there and, under the protection of the government, shown there, and only there. His reasoning is that people will come, especially tourists, from all over Europe to see this film by the world's greatest film-maker. The populace will not object to the presence of the film because (1) it is the work of a major artist, and (2) business will be booming.

The entire project is seen by Harry as a great money-maker whereas Boris' interest is the solution of the problem: Is it possible to make an all-out erotic film on an acceptable level of aesthetics?

The film is called The Faces of Love and consists of episodes, each treating a different form of love—idyllic, profane, homosexual, incestuous, maternal, etc. The major part of the story deals with the actual filming, where some amusing things happen . . .

The plot of The Blue Movie is based on fact. When Candy became a bestseller the film rights were automatically sold. But the censorship laws in America are much more permissive as regards the written word than the photographic image, and Candy as a film could never get by as it stood. On the other hand, to bowdlerize a work of frank pornography is to take away its whole point—including its selling point; and anyway the authors would not agree to too emasculated a version. So it was decided to film Candy in all its candour with a cast of super-stars, who offered their services more or less free.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR volunteered for the part of Aunt Livia. Richard Burton chose the gynaecologist who examines Candy in the lavatory. Peter Sellers could not make up his mind between Doctor Krankheit and Professor Mephesto; in the end he would probably have played both. They were going to find a "new girl" for Candy—and the auditions might well have provided material for a further chapter of the book. Nothing in the original was to be toned down. Once made, it was thought, a pornographic movie with such a cast would, somehow or other, find its way to a screen. It could, for example, run for a season at the National Film Theatre (a club) and solve for ever the financial difficulties of that organization. Or every cinema where it played could transform itself into a club, despatching membership cards to the entire local population . . . At all events, a great deal of money would eventually be made, although it might take time.

"It fell through at the last moment", says Terry Southern. "United Artists were going to do it and they put up quite a bit of money to get the script written. I wrote the script and they approved of it and on the very day they were going to sign the contract a movie came out called Kiss Me Stupid and it got condemned by the Legion of Decency which was a sort of kiss of death. So they said, let's wait and see what happens with this, and they're still waiting. It will eventually be done at just the right moment, I guess."

Sitting in his office at United Artists, wearing a respectable dark suit, Terry Southern seemed tentative and rather solemn. His wild, hip phase has become increasingly calm and cool—so cool, in fact, that while talking to him one wonders if one is the victim of some sort of double bluff. Is he, like Grand Guy Grand, waiting to see how much one will swallow? In his writing he is an expert on verbal clichés, of which he has amassed a magnificent collection. On these he can construct dazzling, baroque variations, so that they cease to be clichés and become another language, personal to Terry Southern. But in conversation, it is not always clear whether the clichés are between quotes or not; and they remain disappointingly flat. "The crumbling values of our culture . . . search for values to replace those that are outmoded . . . the actors I've worked with have all been pure salt . . . it has a lot of good original stuff in it and I'm certainly glad to be associated with it." Is this Southern himself speaking, or some character from a book banned for display and forbidden to minors, a daringly experimental work saying and doing things that haven't already been said and done? Will the speaker suddenly act in some outrageous and shocking way, turning the whole interview into uneasy farce? Well, he doesn't. A mildly satiric emphasis in his speech provides a faint echo of those indignant italics, suggestive dashes and hysterical exclamation marks which punctuate his writing. But in spite of this he seems (most surprising adjective of all) "sincere". Perhaps stuffy old Hawthorne and Poe were posthumously vindicated when Candy was accepted by a public nourished on Dinner at Antoine's and Peyton Place, and Terry Southern checked in at the Dorchester. Who's stuffy now?

Why your help makes sense

Many people find the facts of world hunger far too appalling to grasp. What Oxfam tries to say, in every possible way it can, is that hunger is not a multi-million statistic, a cold fact to evoke brief horror and then be shrugged off. World hunger is people, suffering and dying. This is why it does make sense to help Oxfam.

If you are undecided about the value of overseas-aid organisations, the following points may interest you.

* Oxfam's resources are insufficient to help whole countries, but we have a job to do in helping people who are too far down the queue to benefit from large-scale international programmes.

* Our aid goes from people to people. Support comes from all over the country, from young and old, rich and poor. We claim no religious or political allegiance. We appeal for support wherever we can—from businessmen and housewives, trade unionists and teachers, painters and pop-stars.

* Thanks to so much voluntary help and 22 years experience, Oxfam is able to keep its costs low. Administrative costs account for only 1d. in every shilling.

* Total aid amounted to nearly £3 million spent in over 80 countries. All grants are administered on the spot by recognised international organisations or Oxfam's own Field Directors. Careful watch is kept on projects and regular reports called for.

* Money sent to Oxfam works. It buys food and medical supplies in emergencies, welfare and rehabilitation for refugees, seed, fertilizer, tools and training to help end hunger permanently in developing countries.

There's nothing sentimental about all this. It is down-to-earth work that feeds, clothes, houses, trains and cares for people. It makes sense.

If you want to help, you can do so today—with a cheque, postal order or covenant. However large or small your gift, you may be sure it will help someone, somewhere.

BOOKS IN DEMAND

Best-seller lists are not so much a guide to what people buy as to what bookshops hope to sell. They are certainly not a guide to what people actually read. This can be gauged more accurately by canvassing the free libraries. The following titles are "heavily reserved". But since the number of copies held by a library will affect the number of reservations, it is not an accurate statistical survey. Our rough guide simply records which books received most mentions in September from nine library lists, representing 101 separate libraries in the London area. Mentions in brackets

This 'Queen' reaches New York in 5 days. She could take less.

Who's hurrying?

Cunard are very clever.

Look how they time your journey to New York: you leave Southampton towards the end of one week; arrive New York just after the next one's started.

Total time at sea? A long weekend.

Your 'Queen' could, if she wanted, lop a few hours off her crossing. But who on earth wants to hurry a long weekend?

And what a long weekend!

For a start there's the sea, and the sun, and bracing, therapeutic salt air. A crossing by Cunard can do more for your well-being than a bookful of doctor's prescriptions.

Then there's your great 'Queen', with her broad scrubbed decks, some as long as a village street. Her magnificently appointed public rooms. And charming, restful private rooms. Her gymnasiums, and swimming pools, and night clubs, and shopping centre. And, surprisingly, her floral gardens.

Third generation service

The service is out of this world! Marvellous personal care and attention, often from members of third-generation Cunard families. Great food, from 100-item international menus. 5 new films each trip. A library bright with new books. Concerts and dancing and cabaret.

Even horse-racing!

The only trouble with a Cunard long weekend is that it lasts only a long weekend.

Privacy

Cunard time things so that the businessman doesn't spend too long away from business.

However, you may still prefer to work.

And for you there are secretaries, telephones to anywhere, and privacy.

And if you want to enjoy a long weekend and speed, try things this way: go one-way Cunard, and one-way B.O.A.C./Cunard.
